Putin's desperation

It is clear that Vladimir Putin is clinging on to power by his fingernails. His mobilisation of 300,000 reservists is, in effect, state-sponsored homicide, as these people will be given a day's training and a rifle, then thrown into battle to be slaughtered by a well-trained, properly equipped and motivated Ukrainian army. Putin's much-vaunted tactical nuclear weapons are, in my opinion, virtually unusable. I would be surprised if the trucks that carry them actually work, as I expect they are in the same poor state as the rest of Russia's vehicles. As soon as they move - as they must to get in range of Ukraine - Nato intelligence will identify them and could, if necessary, take them out before they have a chance to fire. When the Russian population realises that it is not 5,000 soldiers who have been killed, but rather more probably 100,000, they will surely remove this tyrant from office. Then we can get back to restoring world peace, sorting out the cost of living crisis and dealing with climate change.

This reads exactly like Goebbels propaganda.

Look at the leaders of the new age. The Prime Minister of Finland, Sanna Marin, arrived in Kyiv to convey solidarity from the Finnish people. ...see more

What about 36 white supremacist neo-nazi battalions such as Azov that are fully integrated into the Ukrainian army. Am I supposed to stand with them as well. What about the fact that the racist Buffalo mass shooter used the same nazi symbology (black sun) that is also present in the Azov battalion insignia and is worn by many Ukrainian soldiers. Or the fact that the Ukrainian president posts on social media Ukrainian soldiers that wear patches of the German SS battalions or the fact that Finland was part of the Nazi Germany axis and fought to implement the final solution. Am I supposed to just ignore that.

Кот Путина @VVPutin_cat

В МИД РФ пояснили, что "Искандер-М" в Калининградской обл. нужны для защиты бобровых плотин от африканских термитов. Европе они не угрожают.
