General info:

Robert Steuckers is a Belgian translator and political activist on the far right, associated with the European New Right/Nouvelle Droite. He is a former member of GRECE, an ethnonationalist think tank co-founded by political philosopher Alain de Benoist of whom Steuckers was his personal secretary from 1981 on.

He published the political/ideological journals Orientations and Vouloir. Articles by him led to a first meeting with Alexander Dugin in 1990.

According to the political scientist Anton Shekhovtsov, Dugin once told an interviewer it was Steuckers who introduced him to the concept of National Bolshevism:

He met Dugin several times between their first encounter in Paris and 2005:

With the foundation of his Synergies Européennes organization in 1994, Steuckers took an Eurasianist direction, promoting the Duginist

Multipolar ideology by selecting, translating and spreading appropriate texts internationally and extremely prolifically.

The last couple of years, and behind the screens, he also occupies himself with the Identitarian organization Feniks. This group was involved in organizing anti covid measures protests. He is a good friend of the Belgian pro-russian propagandist Kris Roman.

This ruscistic person is also an antisemite. See e.g.
